Hi Sweetheart!

It's a little after 11:00 AM on Sunday. I am upset, as the phone has been out of order since it cut us off yesterday around 2:45. I've been bugging the guards since 6:00 PM Saturday, which is when I first realized there was a problem. Turns out there is nobody here on the weekends to fix it, and the outage is only affecting a few floors, so they're reluctant to call somebody in. I told them that since some phones are working, it is more than likely a network issue and all they need to do is look for a network switch with all the activity lights on solid, then cycle the power. For some reason, they're not taking me seriously and doing what I said! 😡 I sure am not used to being ignored like this, especially when it comes to troubleshooting computer glitches. Since I didn't get a chance to talk to you this morning, I thought I'd write to you! I got a new neighbor yesterday. The black guy that was there got moved across the way, and they put an old white man there instead.

I overheard the mental health people talking to him and he claims to be suicidal. Not sure what he's been taking, but they said something about an overdose.
I haven't spoken to him yet, but I was thinking to suggest an easy way to die would be to ask a car load of thugs to turn their stereos down! Somehow I don't think that would get the laugh I was going for. That's all I have for now, besides the usual... That I love a mirror you and I dream about you every night.
I am so looking forward to being reunited. I feel like a part of me has been missing.

Love You!

- Michael David

P.S. It's after 7:00 pm and still no phones!

I will be sure to write a strongly worded letter to the manufacturer!
