Sr. A. Corey

Hi Sweetheart!

I spoke to mom tonight. She passed on my "demands" to Cory. In a nutshell, Cory said he will not be representing me if I insist on going to trial 9/23. I wish I had the money to fight this on our terms, but I don't, so I think I'll just shut up about it. I did compose a letter to mom & Dad, proposing we streamline the process. I'm still thinking "worst case" in that I'll be stuck here until my case goes to trial. Some way, somehow, I need to get back into the mindset that I'll be coming home soon, then we can let Cory take as much time as he needs.

I'm reading an author named Stuart Woods. He has a few characters in his series. One guy - Stone Barrington, is a NY attorney. He makes a drink that I think you may enjoy. Called a Vodka Gimlet. Not as strong as a martini, though you drink it from a martini glass. Here is the recipe: 3 parts vodka and 1 part Rose's Sweetened Lime Juice. Take a full fifth of vodka, pour six ounces into another bottle and replace that with the lime juice (put that bottle in the freezer* and do not serve over ice. Try it and let me know!

*I'll freeze for a few hours

It's Tuesday night and you won't get this until Friday or Saturday. I'm hoping that you enjoyed your 4th of July celebration, however you spent it. I will be thinking about our first, sitting underneath them (practically). Serendipity has been the watchword with us. Remember what a great time we had in Ft. Lauderdale? A totally unplanned day and we had a great brunch by the beach, then found that interstate house with the open bar! If memory serves, we had dinner at Guanabaco on the way home. Almost the only thing planned was to see Val McHale at the Hardrock... Serendipity indeed. I have no doubt that we'll be able to make many more memories together, babe. If I don't come home soon, then I'll be there later. That's a promise - as logic and reasoning will prevail. How can they say there were no guns when they did not search the parking lot where witnesses saw them park and get out? Well, that's a reasonable doubt will be raised and then we'll get to all the short-duration phone calls that were made, then Davis' history with authority figures. I promise you - we have the truth, evidence and law on our side. Love you!
